

The Forest Creature

 8  0  1

Chapter 1 by Nork Wolf

An old man started telling a story and he started telling the story like this: "There was a gray-furred creature with snout longer than a cat's who watches a forest.

The forest is usually quiet and calm except when the little two-legged, no-fur creatures run through with their loud popping things. The long-snouted, gray-furred creature growls at the little two-legged, no-fur creatures to go away. They run off to their home crying to the taller two-legged, no-fur creatures. The taller two-legged, no-fur creatures get things with similar appearance and similar sound to the popping things except the sound is slightly different. The things the taller two-legged, no-fur creatures held shot small silver round balls at the gray-furred creature as he ran away...
